Memo

Just over twenty years ago the state of South Dakota recognized the economic development potential that would emerge if resources were directed toward developing a highly educated information technology workforce. To this end, Dakota State University in Madison, South Dakota, reinvented itself from primarily a teacher education college to a recognized leader in the education of IT professionals. Students can choose from a number of undergraduate and graduate IT programs and starting in the Fall of 2006, a Doctor of Science in Information Systems.

Innovative and challenging academic programs - Every one of DSU's majors provide students with a foundation in technology. They can study in the fields of computer information systems and computer science, business, teacher education, arts and sciences with a number of unique degree programs including scientific forensic technology, digital arts and design or computer and network security.

Technology focused - Dakota State's campus-wide, wireless network is the perfect backdrop for our technology-infused courses. Each student is issued a convertible notebook computer to enhance this extraordinary learning experience. It's a powerful tool that changes the way they live and learn on campus and provides them with a distinctive set of skills to take out into today's workforce.

Memo

South Dakota State University, located in Brookings, is the state's largest university. SDSU's educational base includes degrees in electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, agricultural engineering, engineering physics, computer and information science, and economics, just to name a few.

SDSU's engineering programs are practical. Students learn from a faculty that has industrial design experience. They learn from business leaders who are currently in the industry. And they learn by experience-both in a lab setting and in a business setting.

The Manufacturing engineering Technology Program, implementing in response to the needs of industry in South Dakota, gives students experience in the production aspect of business.

Memo

Mitchell Technical Institute is home to some of the best communication technology in the state of South Dakota. A new $4.5 million Technology Center opened in 2003 and houses the Satellite Communications and Telecommunications programs. Additionally, a 180 seat amphitheatre is available for businesses and industries to provide training for staff, clients or the public. A new uplink truck keeps students busy learning about and providing mobile communications services. The Digital Dakota Network, an integral part of the statewide distance learning network, is maintained by MTI technicians. MTI offers 29 programs in five career areas: Agriculture, Business, Food Service, Health, and Trade and Technical.

Memo

Ten thousand individuals obtain services through Southeast Technical Institute every year. In addition, thousands of employees of area businesses attend Business and Industry Training workshops, while Southeast provides services to other groups and individuals from the Sioux Falls region and the state.

As technology changes, so does Southeast. This technical institute offers innovative education opportunities previously unavailable in the state. Programs such as cardiovascular technology and laser/electro-optics technology are two examples of the cutting-edge training available. Strategic thinking and anticipating future trends have allowed Southeast to maintain strong business relationships while promoting economic development in South Dakota.
